Career Resource Center opens at CNET

PENSACOLA, Fla. - Chief of Naval Education and Training (CNET) staff members and Naval Education and Training Command (NAVEDTRACOM) personnel now have access to a Career Resource Center (CRC) to further their leadership and management skills. The CRC is located inside CNET headquarters, building 628, room 186, on the first floor. The Center has five computer workstations and is open to all members, civilian and military.

During the Grand Opening a plaque with the "Stakeholders" names engraved on it was presented to Charlotte Hobbs, Civilian Leadership Development Program Manager, by Vice Admiral John Craine Jr., Chief of Naval Education and Training.

The "Stakeholders" or Working Group members that helped in establishing the CRC are Charlotte Hobbs, Pat Geoghagan, Margie McDowell, Marilyn Klever, Sue Ray, Charlie Gimbel, Joe Homes, Jackie Ellington, Mike Fitzpatrick, Linda Jo Graham, Cathy Neri and Mary Farrow.

2-2-2-2 (CRC)

"The opening of the CRC is a big step towards personnel developing their leadership and management skills. The Center will provide all sorts of resources for the staff here at CNET. It provides them with a place to go to find additional information by doing computer based training," said Hobbs.

"Every person who worked on this effort is truly a 'hero'. The time and talent that was dedicated was extensive, impressive, and freely given. I am honored to be a member of the team."

Hobbs also said that, "the CRC will provide a place where a person can get away from the telephones and interruptions that happen to each of us during the day and really focus on the training they need to have to enhance their knowledge and skills."

The center is a central location for an array of materials, including Human Resource Office training announcements, executive training brochures/information and rotational assignment listings. Also assessable at the Center are brochures on government and non-government programs, courses, seminars, and conferences.

Available for check out for home use are numerous videocassettes, audiocassettes, CDs and books on leadership development and management skills. For more information on the CRC contact Marilyn Klewer or Charlotte Hobbs at (850) 452-4166/4712 or DSN 922.
